

Publication date: Available online 18 February 2015

Source: Technological Forecasting and Social Change

Author(s): Yongrok Choi

The rapidly growing economies of the countries in Northeast Asia have greatly affected the global community. The performance-oriented mechanisms for collaboration networking demonstrated by the governments and leading companies in these countries may deserve credit for their successful economic performance. The papers in this special issue seek to identify sustainable mechanisms and successful factors based on diverse sustainable development policies and sustainable management strategies. They emphasize the commitment of leadership, cultural adaptability, and procedural intermediation for performance-oriented e-governance in the region.

Read Full Article